Hi, my name is Dr Nthati Rametse, and I’m your lecturer for Finance for Entrepreneurship and Regulatory Environment Causes in the Bachelor of Business Entrepreneurship Program.

I joined RMIT University in November 2008. What I bring to the Entrepreneurship Program is the skill and knowledge that I acquired over time through education and work. I hope my expertise in financial management and small-business management will add value to develop your knowledge and enterprising capabilities to start and grow your enterprises with confidence.

I am sure that you are all capable of identifying innovative ideas and opportunities to start your businesses. As mentioned before, my area of expertise is finance and small-business management. I am a member of the National Institute of Accountants in Australia, Australasian Tax Teachers Association, and Tax Policy Research Unit at Curtin University in the School of Economics and Finance.

It is through these professional bodies that I keep abreast of the latest developments in the area of entrepreneurship. Finally, I hope you will all benefit from my professional and academic expertise to build your knowledge and skills in entrepreneurship.

Good luck with your studies.
