Dr Afreen Huq

Hi, I’m Afreen, I teach two courses in this program. One is for the first-year students named The Entrepreneurial Process, and the other one is for the third-year students which is on social entrepreneurship. A very interesting course indeed.

In terms of my background, I come from a developing country, a foundation country in particular, named Bangladesh. My research interest has primarily been in the field of women’s entrepreneurship and I have a PhD in that area. I’ve also worked quite extensively with a number of international donor organisations in the field of small and medium enterprise promotion, because for developing countries SME promotion has been used as a vehicle to reduce poverty, and I feel that my research experience in the field of women’s entrepreneurship and that of working with a number of international organisations in SME promotion has been very useful and complimentary to what I do in this program.
